

Why does the accuracy here (monotonically) increase as the number of dimensions increases?

- The accuracy increases when the number of dimensions because the data will become much more distinguishable from one another. As a result, the kNN algorithm will become more accurate in comparing test points to trained data.